Prisoners in 1988

The number of prisoners under the jurisdiction of Federal or State correctional authorities at yearend 1988 reached a record 627,402. The States and the District of Columbia added 41,339 prisoners; the Federal system, 1,628. The increase for 1988 brings total growth in the prison population since 1980 to 297,581—an increase of about 90% in the 8-year period (table 1).

The 1988 growth rate (7.4%) was greater than the percentage increase recorded during 1987 (7.2%), and the number of new prisoners added during 1988, 42,967, was about 3,500 higher than the number added during the preceding year (39,463). The 1988 increase translates into a nationwide need for more than 800 new prison bedspaces per week.

Prisoners with sentences of more than 1 year (referred to as "sentenced prisoners") accounted for 96% of the total prison population at the end of 1988, growing by 7.8% during the year (table 2). The remaining prisoners had sentences of a year or less or were unsentenced (like those, for example, awaiting trial in States with combined prison-jail systems).

The number of sentenced Federal prisoners grew at nearly the same rate as sentenced prisoners in the States during the year (8.1% vs. 7.7%). Among the 7,190 Federal prisoners with no sentences or sentences of 1 year or less were 1,856 under the jurisdiction of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, a decrease of 528 from the number held at the end of 1987 (2,384). The number of Federal prisoners with no sentences or sentences of less than 1 year declined by 1,587 during 1988 (from 8,777 to 7,190), while the number of sentenced prisoners increased by 3,215.

In 7 States total prison populations decreased by a total of 961 inmates during 1988. Four of these States—North Carolina, South Dakota, Washington, and West Virginia—also reported declines in 1987. Compared to yearend 1986 counts, the number of prisoners at the end of 1988 was 3.6% lower than 2 years earlier in North Carolina, 12.4% lower in South Dakota, 11.9% lower in Washington, and 1.6% lower in West Virginia.

Total prison population rose most rapidly during 1988 in Rhode Island (33.5%), Colorado (24.7%), New Hampshire (17.5%), Michigan (16.1%), and California (13.7%). Nine States and the District of Columbia reported total prisoner increases of 10% or more since yearend 1987. California's increase of nearly 9,200 prisoners during the year

April 1989

This Bulletin presents population counts for the Nation's prisons on December 31, 1988. Prison population increased 7.4% during 1988, a slightly higher rate than in 1987. The 1988 increase of 43,000 prisoners approximately equals a demand for more than 800 new prison beds per week. The number of prisoners at the end of the year set a new record for the 14th consecutive year.

The Bureau of Justice Statistics expresses its appreciation to the departments of corrections in the 50 States, the District of Columbia, and the Federal prison system, who make it possible for us to continue to gather and report data on the Nation's prisoners.

was the largest for any single jurisdiction. Although California had 11.5% of all the Nation's prisoners at the end of 1987, its prison population growth in 1988 accounted for 21% of the national increase. Colorado, for the second year in a row, experienced an annual increase of more than 20% in the number of State prisoners; its yearend 1988 population of 5,997 was 58% higher than the yearend 1986 population of 3,804.

Rates of incarceration increase

On December 31, 1988, the number of sentenced prisoners per 100,000 residents was 244, also setting a new record. Eleven of the seventeen jurisdictions with rates equal to or greater than the rate for the Nation were located in the South, 4 were in the West, and 1 each was in the Midwest and Northeast.

Since 1980 the number of sentenced inmates per 100,000 residents has risen nearly 76%, from 139 to 244. During this period per capita incarceration rates have grown most rapidly in the West, increasing by 123% (from 105 to 234), compared to 115% in the Northeast (from 87 to 187), 83% in the Midwest (from 109 to 200), and 41% in the South (from 188 to 266). The number of sentenced Federal prisoners per 100,000 U.S. residents has increased 89% (from 9 to 17) over the same period.

Western States grow faster than other regions

During 1988 the growth in the sentenced prisoner population in the Western States, 11.5%, was higher than in the other regions. The number of sentenced prisoners grew by 8.7% in the Northeast, 8.6% in the Midwest, and 5.0% in the Southern States. The sentenced Federal prison population grew by 8.1%. Since 1980 sentenced prison populations in Western States have increased more than 166%, compared to growth of nearly 120% in the Northeast, 86% in the Midwest, and 59% in the South (table 3). Over the same period the number of sentenced Federal prisoners grew by 107%. Overall, the number of sentenced prisoners nationwide has increased by 91% since 1980, from 315,974 to 603,928.

Since 1980, 18 States, the District of Columbia, and the Federal prison system have more than doubled the number of sentenced prisoners, and Alaska, California, New Hampshire, and New Jersey have experienced a threefold increase. In 1980 these 4 States housed 29,725 sentenced prisoners or 9.4% of the Nation's sentenced prisoners. In 1988 they housed 93,597 or 15.5% of the sentenced inmates nationwide.

California's increase of 50,516 sentenced prisoners since 1980 accounts for 67% of the increase for the West and 19% of the increase among all States over the period. In 1980, 7.9% of the Nation's sentenced State prisoners were in California; in 1988, 13.1%. (For additional State comparisons, see table 4.)

Female prisoner population growth outpaces that of males

Women inmates numbered 32,691, increasing at a faster rate during 1988 (12.5%) than males (7.1%) (table 5). The rate of incarceration for sentenced males (476 per 100,000 males in the resident population), however, was about 20 times higher than for sentenced females (24 per 100,000 females in the resident population).

The female prison population has grown more rapidly than the male population in each year since 1981. The higher growth rates for women over the 1981-88 period have raised the female percent of the Nation's prison population from 4.2% in 1981 to 5.2% in 1988 (table 6).

In 1988, 21 States and the Federal system had more than 500 female inmates. Among these jurisdictions, 14 had increases of at least 10%, led by Connecticut's increase of 21.7% (from 452 in 1987 to 550 in 1988). California's increase during 1988, 741 inmates, accounted for more than 20% of the nationwide increase of 3,627.

More than 14,000 in local jails because of State prison crowding

At the end of 1988, 17 States reported a total of 14,314 State prisoners held in local jails because of crowding in State facilities (table 7). The number of State prisoners held locally increased by 18.5% over that of yearend 1987. Three States--Louisiana, New Jersey, and Tennessee--accounted for nearly three-fifths of the State-sentenced prisoners held locally. Six States--Idaho, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Jersey, and Tennessee--held more than 10% of their State-sentenced prisoners in local jails because of State

Estimating prison capacity

The extent of crowding in the Nation's prisons is difficult to determine precisely because of the absence of uniform measures for defining capacity. A wide variety of capacity measures is in use among the 52 reporting jurisdictions because capacity may reflect both available space to house inmates and the ability to staff and operate an institution. To estimate the capacity of the Nation's prisons, States were asked to supply up to three measures for yearend 1988--rated, operational, and design capacities. These measures were defined as follows:

- Rated capacity is the number of beds or inmates assigned by a rating official to institutions within the State.
- Operational capacity is the number of inmates that can be accommodated based on a facility's staff, existing programs, and services.
- Design capacity is the number of inmates that planners or architects intended for the facility.

Of the 52 reporting jurisdictions, 33 supplied rated capacities, 44 provided operational capacities, and 38 submitted design capacities (table 8). As a result, estimates of total capacity and measures of the relationship to population are based on the highest and lowest capacity figures provided. (Twenty-three States reported one capacity measure or gave the same figure for each capacity measure they reported.)

Most jurisdictions are operating above reported capacity

Prisons generally require reserve capacity to operate efficiently. Prison dormitories and cells need to be maintained and repaired periodically, special housing space is needed for protective custody and disciplinary cases, and space may be needed to cope with emergencies. At the end of 1988, 10 States reported they were operating below 95% of their highest capacity. Forty jurisdictions and the Federal Prison System reported operating at 100% or more of their lowest capacity; 34 of these held populations that met or exceeded their highest reported capacities.

^aExcludes State-sentenced inmates held in local jails due to crowding where they have been included in the total prisoner count.

^bCapacity figures available for males only.

West Virginia reports an additional capacity to house 82 female prisoners.

^cCapacity figures exclude 912 beds in halfway houses and 286 beds in psychiatric facilities.

Overall, State prisons were estimated to be operating at approximately 107% of their highest reported capacities and at 123% of their lowest reported capacities (table 9). The Federal system was estimated to be operating between 133% and 172% of capacity.

Between 1987 and 1988, State and Federal prison capacities were estimated to have increased by approximately 28,000-31,000 beds (based on the highest and lowest capacities in table 9). At the end of 1988, estimated capacities were:

	Highest reported capacity	Lowest reported capacity
U.S. total	566,898	491,596
Federal	37,469	29,112
State	529,429	462,484

Approximately 6% of the available capacity nationwide at the end of 1988 was maintained by the Federal Government, while about 8% of the Nation's inmates were subject to the jurisdiction of Federal prison authorities.

Crime and prison population growth

There is some evidence that during the period 1980-87 changes in criminal justice policies have increased a criminal's probability of being incarcerated from levels existing in prior years. Murder, nonnegligent manslaughter, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, and burglary are among the most serious crimes, and they account for approximately half of prison commitments from courts. In 1960 there were 62 prison commitments for every 1,000 of these crimes reported to the police (table 10). During the rest of the decade this ratio steadily declined, reaching 23 in 1970, and was relatively stable during the 1970's. Between 1980 and 1987 the ratio increased 92%, from 25 commitments per 1,000 reported crimes to 48.

Similarly, between 1960 and 1970 the ratio of prison commitments to adult arrests for the selected crimes declined from 299 per 1,000 to 170. This ratio was relatively stable during the rest of the 1970's, but it increased by 54% between 1980 and 1987, from 196 commitments per 1,000 adult arrests to 301. (See "Methodological note" for more detail on these data.)

Admissions-to-crime ratios for individual States provide an alternative measure of prison use to population-based rates (table 11). Population-based incarceration rates take into account the number of sentenced prisoners and the size of the resident population in a jurisdiction. The crime-based rate measures entry into prison relative to the magnitude of the crime problem during a year.

Between 1980 and 1987 the ratio of court commitments to prison and reported crimes increased 92%, from 25 commitments per 1,000 crimes to 48 (table 12). Over the same period the number of prison commitments per 100,000 adult residents increased 56%, from 80 to 125. The Northeast had the largest percentage increase in the number of commitments relative to reported crime while the West experienced the largest percentage gain in prison commitments relative to population. However, in both 1980 and 1987 the South had the largest number of court commitments to prison relative to reported crime and to population.

Data for crimes reported to the police and adult arrests are from Federal Bureau of Investigation, Crime in the United States, 1978-87 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office). Commitments to prison are inmates admitted from sentencing courts. The data on which this table is based are presented in the Methodology.

Besides the increased use of prison relative to reported crime, arrests, and resident population, prison population has also been affected by changes in the extent of the illegal drug problem. An estimated two-thirds of those in State prisons for a drug offense were convicted of trafficking or manufacturing illegal drugs.* Since 1980 the number of adult arrests for drug violations has increased by 80% and the number of arrests for sales or manufacturing of illegal drugs has grown by 113% (table 13).

Surveys of State prison inmates in 1979 and 1986 also illustrate the prevalence of active drug involvement among prisoners. In 1979, 42.7% of the 288,086 offenders in State prisons either had been convicted of a drug crime or had been daily users of illegal drugs in the month preceding the offense for which they were imprisoned. In 1986, 46.8% of the 500,725 prisoners in State institutions were found to be actively involved in drugs, either as users or by conviction for a drug offense. Over the period 1979 to 1986, when State prison populations increased by 212,639, the number of offenders in prison who had been actively involved in drugs increased by 111,326.

Methodological note

This Bulletin is based upon an advance count of prisoners conducted immediately after a calendar year ends. A detailed, final count of prisoners and prisoner movements will be published later.

The data used to compute the rates in table 10 are presented in the appendix table.

Note: The number of court commitments to prison is based upon the total number of entries from sentencing courts with sentences greater than 1 year. The number of reported offenses is derived from annual publications from the FBI on the number of murders, non-negligent manslaughters, rapes, robberies, aggravated assaults, and burglaries reported to police agencies. The estimated number of adult arrests for these crimes is derived by multiplying the estimated total number of arrests by the percentage of known arrests age 18 and older, as reported annually by the FBI. For 1960 and 1965, estimates of adult arrests were based on FBI data for total known arrests for those years and were weighted for reporting coverage (see Crime in the United States, 1970, tables 24-25). By year, the percent of adult arrests among all arrests for these crimes was:

1960 - 65.7%	1982 - 71.5%
1965 - 61.4%	1983 - 72.1%
1970 - 61.5%	1984 - 73.0%
1975 - 60.8%	1985 - 73.2%
1980 - 67.4%	1986 - 75.4%
1981 - 69.1%	1987 - 75.7%

Explanatory notes

Alabama. Capacity in residential programs is not included in the reported capacity figures.

Alaska. In this State, prisons and jails form one integrated system. All NPS data include, therefore, both jail and prison populations.

Arizona. Population counts are based on custody data. Population counts exclude 485 male inmates housed in local jails due to crowding.

Arkansas. Population counts for male "Inmates with over 1 year maximum sentence" include an undetermined number of "Inmates with a sentence of 1 year or less." The male population counts exclude 335 male inmates housed in local jails due to crowding. The Arkansas Department of Corrections has only one type of capacity, which is set by the Board of Corrections. This capacity is reported as operational capacity.

California. Population counts are based on custody data.

Colorado. Population counts for "Inmates with over 1 year maximum sentence" include an undetermined number of "Inmates with a sentence of 1 year or less." Capacity figures include 465 spaces in residential community centers.

Connecticut. In this State, prisons and jails form one integrated system. All NPS data include, therefore, both jail and prison populations.

Delaware. In this State, prisons and jails form one integrated system. All NPS data include, therefore, both jail and prison populations.

District of Columbia. Population counts exclude those inmates housed in Federal Bureau of Prisons facilities. Population counts include 360 inmates housed in other States as a result of crowding.

Federal. Population counts for "Unsentenced inmates" include 1,837 males and 19 females who come under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. Capacity figures apply to Bureau of Prisons institutions only and do not include capacity provided by contract facilities.

Florida. Population counts are based on custody data.

Georgia. Population counts are based on custody data. In accordance with the policy of Georgia's Department of Corrections, inmates housed in local jails awaiting pickup are not included in the jurisdiction population until they enter a State prison.

Hawaii. Population counts are as of January 1, 1989. In this State, prisons and jails form one integrated system. All NPS data include, therefore, both jail and prison populations.

Idaho. Population counts are based on custody data.

Indiana. Population counts are based on custody data.

Iowa. Population counts are based on custody data.

Maryland. While population totals are actual manual counts, the breakdowns for sentence length are estimates based on the actual sentence length breakdowns of Maryland's automated data system.

Massachusetts. Population counts are based on custody data as of December 30, 1988. Population counts for "Inmates with over 1 year maximum sentence" include an undetermined number of "Inmates with a sentence of 1 year or less." Population totals are actual counts; however, the male/female breakdown is an estimate believed to be within 0.1% of the actual counts. By law, offenders in Massachusetts may be sentenced to terms of up to 2 1/2 years in locally operated jails and correctional institutions. Such populations are excluded from the State count but are included in published population counts and rates for local jails and correctional institutions.

Michigan. Population counts include inmates in the custody of Michigan's Department of Corrections and inmates in Michigan's Community Residential Program. Capacity figures exclude the capacities of the Community Residential Program.

Nevada. Reported capacity figures exclude space for females at Nevada's Restitution Centers.

New Hampshire. New Hampshire has no facility to house female inmates. Thus, all females are housed in county, Federal, or other States' facilities.

New Jersey. Rated, operational, and design capacities include 592 bedspaces in county facilities.

North Carolina. While population totals are actual counts, the breakdowns for sentence length are estimates believed to be accurate within 1% of the actual counts.

Ohio. Population counts for "Inmates with over 1 year maximum sentence" include an undetermined number of "Inmates with a sentence of 1 year or less."

Oklahoma. Population counts for "Inmates with over 1 year maximum sentence" may include a small undetermined number of inmates with a sentence of 1 year.

Oregon. Operational capacity excludes 150 beds rented from the State of Washington.

Rhode Island. In this State, prisons and jails form one integrated system. All NPS data include, therefore, both jail and prison populations.

Tennessee. Population counts are based on custody data. Population counts exclude the 2,218 inmates (male and female) housed in local jails due to crowding.

Texas. Population counts are based on custody data. Capacity figures exclude 912 beds in halfway houses and 286 beds in psychiatric facilities.

Vermont. Population counts are as of December 15, 1988. In this State, prisons and jails form an almost completely integrated system. However, some county and municipal authorities do operate local lockups. NPS data include both jail and prison populations. The counts for jail crowding include 34 inmates housed in local lockups. While population totals are actual counts, the breakdowns for sentence length are estimates believed to be accurate within 3% of the actual counts.

Washington. Capacity figures exclude space in work release facilities which housed 524 male and 28 female inmates on December 31, 1988.

West Virginia. The female population counts are based on custody data. The male jurisdiction count excludes an undetermined number of inmates housed in local jails awaiting pickup.

Wyoming. The operational capacity figure is the absolute total bedspace available to Wyoming's Department of Corrections, and it includes 60 bedspaces in community centers.

One free phone call can give you access to a growing data base on drugs & crime

The new Data Center & Clearinghouse for Drugs & Crime is managed by the Bureau of Justice Statistics. To serve you, the center will —

- Respond to your requests for drugs and crime data.
- Let you know about new drugs and crime data reports.
- Send you reports on drugs and crime.
- Conduct special bibliographic searches for you on specific drugs and crime topics.
- Refer you to data on epidemiology, prevention, and treatment of substance abuse at the National Clearinghouse for Alcohol and Drug Information of the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration.
- Publish special reports on subjects such as assets forfeiture and seizure, economic costs of drug-related crime, drugs and violence, drug laws of the 50 States, drug abuse and corrections, and innovative law enforcement reactions to drugs and crime.

- Prepare a comprehensive, concise report that will bring together a rich array of data to trace and quantify the full flow of illicit drugs from cultivation to consequences.
